

Week ending 23.06.2017

In English we are about to write our own Cautionary Tales based on Hilaire Belloc and David Walliams. We have laughed at some of the things that have befallen certain children and are heeding their warnings!

In History, we have completed our 2 minute talks about an aspect of Roman Life in Britain. The talks have been of a very high standard and we have learned something new from everyone. There have been a range of costumes and props used including food and a set of Roman Numerals for everyone (once we completed the quiz!).

In Geography, we have been comparing different maps of our local area as well as finding the counties that boarder Hertfordshire.

We have had some fun in Maths where we used dominoes to create number sentences, column addition and subtraction. We then investigated how to completed 19 calculations using all dominoes-tricky, very tricky!

In Science, we are investigating how water is transported within plants. We have finally found a good use for celery!
